PARLACI DELLA TUA RICERCA

My research analyses the reality faced by thousands of people around the world, especially in the Global South, who are forced to flee their homes as a result of the effects of climate change, sometimes crossing international borders, in search of a safe and dignified place to live. In this context of vulnerabilities, women and girls face discrimination and violence that reduces their resilience to climate change and the migration process. My purpose is to seek socio-legal solutions, within European Union law, to improve and protect the rights, welfare and dignity of these people in contexts of climate disasters.

RACCONTA UNA TUA GIORNATA TIPO AL LAVORO

I start the day with a good cup of coffee. About 8-10 kilometres of running, a shower and I go to the library to do my research work. I usually finish the day with yoga or tai tchi.
